

EMMA GOLDMAN ARRAIGNED.ALLEGED MRS. BATES IN COURT.
She Makes Her Debut as Defendant in a Judgment Suit.

She Pleaded Not Guilty and Said She Would Defend Herself.

Justus Schwab May Offer Himself as Godman for Her.

Emma Goldman, who has been indicted for "inciting to riot," pleaded not guilty before Judge El Tagerald in Part I. of the General Sessions this morning.

She was brought to this city Saturday night from Philadelphia, where she was arrested on Aug. 24 at the request of Supt. Barnes, on the charges of inciting people to riot.

The defendant did not attempt to evade the crowd which had congregated about the building to catch a glimpse of her, but appeared to court in the notoriety she has gained for herself.

Many residents of red tape had to be underground before she could be arraigned in court. She was first placed in the Detective Bureau's office, and on the District-Attorney's orders, was sent to the General Sessions, and again to the District-Attorney's office, and finally into Part I. of the General Sessions.

She was in small private rooms with other defendants, who were all straw hats and had on a pair of gold-rimmed eyeglasses. She walked back and forth with a swinging gait, and acted like the matter was of little consequence.

Several affidavits were in the corner of the building at the time of her arraignment, and these were Justice Schwab and Otto Peukert. The former is said, will offer himself as her godman later in the day.

For some time she was brought into the building until her arraignment in court she was in a small private room with Jacob C. Koenig, who was carrying a bundle of legal documents. The three carried on an animated conversation and Miss Goldman often could be heard along into Part I. of the General Sessions. A seat was given her in the centre of the room in a chair, and after tipping her chair backward and forward and seated about the court in a brazen manner.

Five minutes later she was called into Emma Goldman to the bar. She arose and stepped quickly forward. To the three indictments against her she entered a plea of "not guilty."

District-Attorney, David asked her if she had a lawyer or desired counsel assigned. She said she would not accept either.

She then communicated to Judge Fitzgerald. He repeated Mr. Davis' question in regard to counsel, to which she replied, "I will not accept counsel assigned by the Court, as I will defend myself."

She was then committed to the Tompkins County jail, holding her head up proudly, and nodded to Schwab and Peukert as we passed them. No day was set for the trial.

Praise Is Good

For any medicine you hear about, but to be made well by its use still better. I have for many years suffered with an aching tooth, and my left leg swelled and became so sore that physicians prescribed for me for several days not to move it. This would give me immense pain, and I could not get out of bed.
